1. Suppose that you are working in the Hillsborough county school system during your externship, and you are asked to screen a child for possible deviant speech patterns. You find that the child’s productions reflect a combination of age-appropriate phonological processes (e.g. fronting, cluster reduction, and final consonant deletion) and some of the dialect features typical for eastern accented speech (e.g. /r/ deletion and variation in the production of /ɑ/ and /ɔ/). Should you:
   a. Recommend no special therapy
   b. Recommend accent reduction therapy
   c. Recommend therapy to eliminate the phonological processes
   d. Recommend therapy for accent reduction and to eliminate the phonological processes

2. Suppose a native speaker of Woloff (a language of west Africa) produces the following English words as shown:

   street spaghetti behind active treatment [tɔːrit]     [ɛspɔːɡeti]     [bɔ̃haimdɔ]     [æktf]     [tɔrɪtmɛn]

Given these forms, what might you suspect about the Woloff language? (mark all that apply)
   a. The Woloff language has vowels and consonants that are very different from English
   b. The Woloff language does not contain any onset or coda consonant clusters
   c. The Woloff language does not allow consonants in the coda position
   d. The Woloff language does not have large differences between stressed and unstressed syllables

3. Suppose a native speaker of Thai (a language of southeast Asia) produces the following English words as shown:

   life wish feet sauce precious [laɪp]     [wɪt]     [fɪt]     [sɔt]     [pɾɛʃət]

Given these forms, what might you suspect about the Thai language? (mark all that apply)
   a. The Thai language does not contain any fricatives
   b. The Thai language does not allow fricatives in the coda position
   c. The Thai language does not contain any stressed tense vowels
   d. The Thai language does not contain any stressed lax vowels

4. Transcribe the following four sentences based on the recordings posted on the web (by 12/5) a.

   b.

   c.

   d. 